Risks and Benefits of Psychotherapy

In most cases, the process of psychotherapy brings about positive changes in clients' lives. In some instances however, the psychotherapeutic process can bring up strong negative emotions and distress. The goal of therapy is to reduce such problems over time. Most people find that the long-term benefits of therapy outweigh the short-term risks. You maintain the right to seek a second opinion at any time, and referrals to other therapists or agencies will be given at your request. Successful therapy requires that you take an active role in your own treatment, and work in partnership with your therapist. It is important that you are a willing and active participant in your treatment. If you have any questions about your treatment or treatment options, please ask.

Maintaining confidentiality is very important in any therapeutic setting. Every effort will be made to keep your identity and personal information private. you. This is for your protection. You are free to break your own confidentiality by talking to me. Please beware doing so you may not be able to maintain your confidentiality based on others presence. In any event, I will not discuss details of your case with you outside of regularly scheduled sessions.

There are a few exceptions to confidentiality that you need to be aware of. I am required and/or allowed by law to disclose certain information about you, without your permission, for the following reasons.

1. Duty to Protect: If I have reasonable suspicion that you are actively planning to harm yourself, I will take steps, up to and including, hospitalizing you against your wishes, in order to prevent a tragedy.
2. Duty to Warn: If I have reasonable suspicions that you're planning an act of violence against another person I have a duty to warn them of such planned acts.
3. Duty to Report: If I have reasonable suspicion to suspect your involvement, or you inform me of an active case of child/elder/or dependent adult abuse and/or neglect I am mandated by law to make report such suspicions. This includes active child-pornography usage and/or any sexual contact/communications with a minor less than 16 years of age.
4. Duty to Comply with Court Orders: If I'm instructed by a Court Order to release your information, I'm legally bound to comply with such orders.

Confidentiality with Respect to Minors

Minors have the right to confidential therapy. For parents or legal guardians who share legal custody, both parents must consent to their child's treatment before the second session. Session records will not be released to parents or guardians without the minor's written consent. A minor must also have written parental consent to participate in therapy group(s). Any information shared by one parent will be shared with the other parent through the therapist, if both parents have legal custody. As the therapist I will NOT communicate with attorneys for either parent or guardian.

Records will only be released by court order, or by consent of both the minor and the parents.

Confidentiality with Couples

Couples are seen as a single “Unit” of treatment, even if seen individually. If during a private conversation you or your partner disclose significant information with me, and I feel it’s in the best interest of the relationship to disclose it to your partner, I will encourage you to share that information voluntarily with them in a joint session. If you do not share this information, I may elect to terminate our working relationship. Information that doesn’t directly affect the couples’ relationship, or that would serve no benefit to the partner, are not relevant. Information that affects the couples’ relationship, or could influence the partner on whether to stay or go, are relevant. This position allows for some of the benefits of confidentiality without the drawbacks of holding to a rigid No-Secrets Policy. (An example of a confidential item would be details of past sexual abuse. An example of a non-confidential item would be an affair.)
